New Music! New Music!
JUST PUBLISHED BY TRIPP & CRAGG, No. 109 Fourth street, Louisville, KY.
HOW CAN I LEAVE THEE?—a beautiful German melody, newly arranged; words by A. N. Gilbert. 25 cents net.
"How can I leave thee?
How can I break apart ties that have bound my heart
Constant to thee?
Earth has no happiness, joy has no power to bless,
Life would but grieve me,
Severed from thee."
MONASTERY BELLS—newly arranged by Wely. Price 30 cents net.
OUR MOTHER'S GRAVE.—
"We're kneeling by thy grave, mother—
The sun has left it now,
And flowers, with its zephyr light,
You glad bill's verdant brow,
Where happy children sport and laugh,
With whom we used to play;
But we may not mingle with them now,
Since thou wert borne away."
We are also receiving daily all the new issues from the East. (jy9) TRIPP & CRAGG.

HOTELS & SUMMER RESORTS.

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR.
THESE CELEBRATED SPRINGS, heretofore known as the Hart Springs, on the Scioto river, 47 miles from Ohio White Sulphur Station, on the Springfield and Delaware Railroad—8 miles from Delaware, on the Cleveland and Columbus Railroad—and 17 miles from the city of Columbus, are now open to the public seeking health or pleasure under auspices and with appointments that will make it FIRST-CLASS in every particular. The present proprietors of the Ohio White Sulphur have liberally added to the buildings and generally accommodations of the estate and have fitted and furnished the whole on the suggestions of taste and luxury.
THE CUISINE WILL BE UNEXCEPTIONABLE.
The scenery of and near the domain has been thought to be the finest in Ohio; the air is pure and healthy; and the medicinal properties of this wonderful spring (giving 120 gallons per minute) are now admitted to possess curative and recuperative influences superior to the famed White Sulphur of Virginia.
There are attached to the establishment all the accessories found at the first summer hotels of the country. The lawns and grounds about the hotel are spacious and well kept, and the beautiful drives through the old forests and along the banks of the romantic river are singularly attractive, though quite secluded.
Arrangements can be made for rooms by addressing ISAAC PAIST, Columbus, Ohio. For any further general information, reference may be made to And'w Wilson & Co., Cincinnati, or Messrs. Failing, of the Nell House, or Mr. Kelsey, of the American Hotel, Columbus; or to Mr. H. Chamberlain, of the American Hotel, Delaware.
FACILITIES FOR REACHING THE SPRINGS.
The 6 o'clock A. M trains from Cincinnati, on the Little Miami and Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroads, connect at Springfield with the cars on the Springfield, Mt. Vernon, and Pittsburg Railroad, and passengers by these trains reach the Ohio White Sulphur Station at 12 o'clock M., and are thence conveyed in carriages over a pleasant road, 4½ miles, to the Springs. j30 dlm

Epperson Springs,
MACON COUNTY, TENN.
THIS HIGHLY REPUTED AND well-known Watering Place will be opened and ready for the reception of visitors and invalids by the 20th of May. As regards the high character of the medical qualities of its many waters, comment is unnecessary; silliced it to say, that the use of the waters has effected cures of various diseases, the treatment of which has foiled the most eminent physicians. There is a practicing physician residing at the Springs, who will be always in attendance should his professional services be required. Our table will be well supplied with the best the country affords, and that prepared in good style. Our stables will also be well attended. We have an abundance of good pure ice stored away for the benefit and comfort of our patrons and visitors. Charges to wit: Transient boarders, from $1 25 to $2 per day, or $7 per week; children under ten years of age, and servants, half price; horses, 50 cents per day; washing and ironing, $1 per dozen. For extra services, a reasonable charge will be made.
A hack will leave the Springs every morning, at 9 o'clock (to run regularly through the season), to meet the Nashville and Louisville stage at the Red House.

GRAYSON SPRINGS, KY.
THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVING undertaken the entire management of Grayson Springs, as a watering place, would announce to his old patrons that he is about to refit the cabin visitors from the 1st of May till the 1st of October, and, feeling grateful for former patronage bestowed on Grayson, trusts that he will merit a continuance of the same.
Pledging myself to render entire satisfaction at Grayson shall be in perfect order for the reception of visitors, with good stewards, meat and tasty cooks, and polite servants, I hope to give general satisfaction in the eating line.
My bar shall be supplied with the best old Kentucky as well as Foreign Liquors, Cigars, &c., and an agreeable bar-keeper.
My Stable shall be well supplied with provender and careful ostlers.
This watering-place is situated 65 miles south of Louisville, in Grayson county, and 25 miles from Elizabethtown, at which place a daily line of stages from Grayson Springs connects with the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and 21 miles from Mammoth Cave communication by stage.

BLUE LICK SPRINGS,
NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY.
JAS. S. HUTCHISON ..... Proprietor.
I HAVE LEASED THIS CELEbrated Watering Place for the ensuing season, and will open the same for the reception of visitors on the 15th of this month.
The celebrity of the Blue Lick Springs is such as to need no particular description. Situated on the Maysville and Lexington turnpike road, twenty miles from Paris (the junction of the share lines and the Covington and Lexington Railroad), and twenty-four miles from Maysville, the location renders this place easy of access from all parts of the country.
The Hotel in all its adjuncts has been thoroughly renovated and put in good repair. The Proprietor can only promise that he will endeavor to keep a
FIRST-CLASS HOTEL
In every respect, and, with the aid of polite and experienced assistants, feels confident that, in point of comfort to guests, the Blue Lick Springs will be second to no Watering Place in the West.
A fine Band of Music has been engaged for the season.
A complete Livery Stable is attached to the premises, where horses and buggies can be had at all times.
A Post-Office has also been established at the Springs. je16 dew

MAMMOTH CAVE, KY.
THE HOTEL AT THE CAVE HAS been completely repaired and refurnished in a superior and elegant style, and is now open for the reception of visitors. The Proprietor has expended a large sum during the last winter and spring in repairing and refurnishing the Hotel, and his facilities for accommodating the traveling public are far superior to any former season. He has made extensive arrangements for the accommodation of a large company at the Cave, and he pledges himself to renewed exertions to please and satisfy all who may visit the same. The Cave is situated in Edmondson county, equal distance between Louisville and Nashville. The railroad is now completed within five miles of Elizabethtown, and will be completed to that point by the first day of June, and will progress rapidly during the summer to completion to Green river, at Munfordville, within 15 miles of the Cave. The distance from Elizabethtown to the Cave is 47 miles. Arrangements have been made with the celebrated stage company of Carter & Thomas to run daily lines of stages from the railroad to the Cave, and private conveyance can at all times be had at the Cave to convey visitors to any point desired. A line of stages from Nashville by the way of Bell's will also run daily to the Cave, as also a line to Grayson Springs, 24 miles north of the Cave. The services of the old guides, together with those celebrated hand, which have been in employment at the Cave since it has been under his management, have been secured. He has a large and commodious stable, good hostlers, polite and attentive servants, an abundant supply of ice, and, in fact, all the conveniences and comforts to be found in first-class hotels. Of the Cave itself, its history is too well known by the intelligent tourist of both Europe and America to need description. Suffice it to say, that the Cave embraces 27 avenues, embracing an aggregate distance of over 200 miles, including the main Cave, with its various avenues, including the "Star" and "Snow-ball" chambers, its domes, pits, rivers, and lakes, and a thousand beautiful and wonderful representatives of nature impossible to describe. The scenery around the Hotel and Cave is beautiful and romantic in the extreme. The Hotel is situated upon high table land, 250 feet above Green river, which makes its situation one of the most healthy and pleasant resorts in the southwest. [je11 d1m] L. J. PROUTER, Prop'r.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Grocers and Produce Dealers.
THE SUBSCRIBERS RESPECTfully announce to their friends and the public generally that they have recently commenced business on Hancock and Jefferson streets—occupying the southeast corner for the Grocery branch of their business, and the southwest corner for Produce and Feed Store. EXPECTATION.

I'm weary waiting for the dawn;
The light is slow in coming on;
When will the Sun in glory rise,
And banish darkness from my eyes?

Too long I've groveled in the night,
Without a star to shed its light—
Without a moon, without a guide,
To lead me through the morass wide.

At times an evanescent ray,
From meteor shot, illumes my way;
But soon its "little light" is o'er,
And leaves the darkness as before.

Weary and worn, forsaken, lost,
How oft my toilsome path I've crossed—
How oft with feeble speech, and faint,
Prone on the earth made my complaint.

Around me dang'rous nets are spread,
And thunders echo overhead;
By doubt and fear always assailed,
No wonder that my courage failed.

When will the sun my way illume,
And with his light dispel my gloom?
When will my darkling journey cease,
And end upon the Plains of Peace?

SELMA.

EAST BEND, BOON CO., KY., July 2, 1858.

THE DESERTS OF SINAI—RAIN AND FLOODS. The peninsular desert is not a land without rain; and, speaking generally of the east, we may say that there seems to be much more rain than we usually give it credit for. In Upper Egypt, certainly, there is hardly such a thing as rain. That region—the region where the wondrous ruin of a hundred temples crowd together, embalmed, and so preserved by the hot air, as effectually as their tenants are by spice and odors—may be called rainless. It is wholly at the mercy of the Nile. Middle Egypt has more rain, though little to boast of. Lower Egypt has considerably more; and in some places might do battle with the droughts on its own resources. But the Desert has more than all Egypt together—only so regulated as to be useless, save for maintaining the thin-strewn dusky shrubs which so timidly sprinkle its wadys. It has its rainy seasons, during which the clouds pour down a deluge; but there is no such regular supply of water as to tell even upon its lowest hollows or most sheltered plains, save in the way of scooping out water-courses, or tearing up tamarisks, or cutting away the half gravelly, half sandy soil, into what the Bedouins call Jurfs, or abrading the more impressible parts of the sandstone steeps, or still more rarely helping (along with local springs, sometimes hot, sometimes cold) to rear up an oasis of palms and tarfas, such as that of Feiran, hard by Mount Serbal, whose praises many travelers have sung, and as many more are likely to sing again. For, by all accounts, it is quite a gem of desert verdure—a genuine "Palmyra," though without a city and without a queen. The rain meant for Egypt seems to be swept aside from that level region by the stormy west wind, and attracted by the mountains of the Peninsula, it turns aside and pours itself down in water spouts upon the Sinatic wastes. But it comes in such rushes, that it brings no blessing to the soil, and is so unequally distributed as to time, that even the spring gets no refreshment from the winter floods—nay, hardly can remember that they have been. If the traveler is bold enough to penetrate the Peninsula during the summer months—from April to August—he may with certainty count upon rainless skies; and he may pitch his tent anywhere, even in the low bed of the torrent; nor will he find a drier or safer place of encampment than any one of the hundred tarfa-groves that cover the bed of el-Arish, from the spot where it leaves the slopes of Et-Tih, to the place where it spreads itself out over the sands of Rhinocolura.

But if he is bent on a winter tour, or travels even so early as January or February, he must be on the lookout, not for showers merely, but for floods. He dare not choose for his encampment that sandy hollow where the tarfa and the rittem are so luxuriantly waving; for though it should be in Wady Taiybeh, "the good," or in Wady-el-Markhah, the "valley of rest," he will find himself reckoning without his host. If the wind shift to the west, bright as the sunset might be over the blue of Bahr Suweis, or above the brow of Abu Dersj beyond, he may find himself, tents, turbans, baggage, provisions, camels, fowls, and all, hurrying down a swollen river; which, ere the next evening's shadows have come down upon these sands, will have passed into the sea, or wholly vanished in the thirsty, porous ground; leaving no trace of its exuberant flow, save a few pools in the deeper hollows, or a few drops in a hole of you flat stone, which the thirsty Arab or his camel stoops to drink up.—North British Review.

MARRIAGE WITH A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER. The question of the legality of marriage with a deceased wife's sister has, in consequence of the decision of Justice Cresswell, and more recently of that of the Vice-Chancellor in the case of Brook ayt. Brook, to which we have heretofore alluded, given rise to considerable discussion in England. The opinion of the latter judge fully sustains that of his brother on the bench, and it may now be considered settled that a marriage between a man and his deceased wife's sister, both being British subjects, performed in a foreign country, the laws of which recognize such marriages, is null and invalid according to the law of England.

Against the severity of this decision an earnest protest has just been made at the annual meeting of the Protestant dissentiug ministers of the Presbyterian, Independent, and Baptist denominations, residing in and about London, who adopted a series of resolutions declaring that the marriage of a man with the sister of his deceased wife is not forbidden by divine law, and ought not to be forbidden by human law; that the pressure of the English law which declares such marriages invalid is much aggravated by the opinion of Mr. Justice Cresswell, to the effect that such marriages, although performed in a country where they are lawful, are not consequently lawful in this country; and that as this decision affects many marriages already contracted, as well as others which may be in contemplation, it is now more necessary than ever to make strenous exertions for the repeal of the existing law.

The bill introduced in the House of Commons, by Lord Bury, for the repeal of the law, is still under consideration, and from the proverbial slowness which attends social and constitutional reforms in England, may fail to become a law at this session of Parliament. That the public feeling is in favor of the measure there can be little doubt.

Musical Matters.

The New York Musical Festival occurred in Jones' Woods, on Monday. Some twenty-five thousand persons, it was soberly computed, participated in the festive exercises. There were a great many females on the ground. A little lager was taken. There were fourteen hundred vocal and six hundred instrumental performers, under the batons of six conductors. Mr. William Henry Fry delivered the oration. It was sharp, earnest, and often very eloquent, characterized, of course, by the peculiarities of thought and expression which Mr. Fry cannot help.

Another operatic season in Gotham has fizzled out in the usual downright style. The staunch advocate of the "art" on Manhattan Island, an implacably bitter opponent of everything in the shape of music in this "village"—the Herald—sets up a melancholy wail to-day over the black ruins. It seems that the seventeen performances have barely paid the scene-shifters and gas bills. As for the "principal artists," they have been singing for nothing. The New Yorkers must get themselves up a little hall, and take to little concerts.

The Promenade Concerts at the Academy of Music, in Philadelphia, are most charming entertainments, and deserve everybody's profound consideration and habitual patronage. The music is precisely adapted to the season; the house is airy and sweet, and the internal refreshment is of the most satisfactory sort.

ARRESTED.—We learn that two young men, named respectively Roberts and Kyle, have been arrested and are now in custody at Milton, on suspicion of implication in the murder of young Conway. The affair creates much excitement in Milton and vicinity.—Mad. Eve'g Cour., 2d.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

This morning ushers in the eighty-second anniversary of our National Independence, and there is something fitting in the fact of its falling upon the Sabbath. We are to have a rest from the strifes and bickerings which have of late divided us into factions—we are to unite as one people in celebrating our birth as a nation, and on this calm and hallowed day, return thanks to the Supreme Ruler that we have come safely thus far. But we have not time nor room to moralize. We leave that to our fair Jeffersonville correspondent. She speaks of the celebration as being past. We presume the citizens of Jeffersonville celebrated yesterday. Our readers cannot fail to be pleased with her letter:

Mr. EDITOR: The eighty second anniversary of our National nativity has been celebrated. The busy, bustling emporium for a while forgot its fevered rush for gain, its strife for profit and advantage, and closed the doors of commerce for a brief season, to send up its shouts of rejoicing in commemoration of this glorious day. The quiet little hamlet of New England awakened at the earliest revellte to shout the wild song of freedom; and received an answering echo from the forest-girt cities of the West. And the "Star-Spangled Banner" waved as proudly o'er the bleak Northern hills, as it did o'er the flowery vales of the sunny South; while the eagle of liberty, with its broad spreading wings, proclaimed from mountain height the freedom of our happy land.

From the sea-beaten sands of the Atlantic to the broad fertile shores of the Pacific, has gone up an incense of freedom from glowing hearts. The booming of cannons and the thundering peals of artillery have hardly yet died away. The exultant shouts of millions of freemen still tremble amid the distant hills; and the enthusiastic bosom still vibrates to the soul stirring song of liberty. It is a season, therefore, most fitting to dwell for a while upon our country—her history of the past and anticipations of the future; for all who claim the proud birth-right of American citizens have a deep and abiding interest in everything that relates to our common country—in its origin and its history.

The age in which we live is characterized by excitement. Never was there a nation so fearlessly progressive, or more sanguine of a glorious future. Proud, indeed, may our country be of the glorious eminence it has attained. States and Empires have fallen to the dust. Classic Greece eclipsed the world, and in her grandeur fell; Rome in her brightest glory went down; but our own fair country, warned by the fate of other nations, has learned a good and wise lesson. The dark storm of disunion may roar like a tempest around us; intriguing politicians may grasp at the proud helm of State; but when the coutest is over, the gallant bark, though tempest tost and tried, rides majestically o'er the turbulent waters of the political sea—true to the Constitution still, bearing unsullied and unsoiled the symbol of liberty streaming o'er land and sea. "Dissolve the Union!" Never! What mind can grasp the terrible consequences of such a deed? Would you bow down the glorious pillar of liberty which our forefathers raised? No, never will we desecrate the graves of our illustrious sires with the blood of civil contest.

May the future smile propitiously upon our favored land, restore the purity of other days, and from all faction, outrage, and fanaticism, guard our sacred fanes. LEILA.

To your closing sentiment, Leila, we say Amen as heartily as you could wish. Faction may endeavor, to rule—fanaticism may carry off a part—but the heart of the people is true to its best interests, and the sober second thought will but restore the wayward, reclaim the wandering, and make firm the weak.

From "Sleepy Hollow" comes another letter from fair "Widow Wimple." She feels hurt that we spoke of her as "gay and dashing." We beg ten thousand pardons for speaking so hastily. Our readers cannot fail to be pleased with this letter, and will look with anxiety for the next. Some will be disappointed, however. The Widow promised a disquisition on widowers; we have no doubt she will give it to us in her next:

Mr. EDITOR: Permit me to preface this with a note of thanks to yourself from "Sleepy Hollow" for the comforting prediction that "Widow Wimple," of this ilk, will become a favorite with your readers. You have ever proven yourself a true prophet in political matters. Knowing this, I feel my fate settled as to position among your "band of correspondents." And then allow me to say as much of this "Sleepy Hollow Widow" as will prevent you from unintentionally misleading others. You say: "A widow, especially a gay and dashing one, is privileged to say what she pleases." Does this not pre-suppose the fact that your correspondent is gay and dashing? I think such would be the impression left by your remark. As I am satisfied you did not intend this, I will give you a passing glimpse of this exception to widows in general, and dashing widows in particular. She is not gay, but cheerful and social; not dashing, but quiet and domestic; not one of the "fast widows either," but an old fogy in most things—takes a medium course as to fashion; never in the lead, nor yet so far behind as to be conspicuous for singularity; employs herself about whatever may be necessary, not caring what may may be thought or said of it by Tom, Dick, and Harry; thinks it not beneath a woman's dignity to be adequate to every call of duty, whether it takes her to the kitchen or parlor; her fingers often busied in that pleasant pastime, "knitting stockings for little feet," considered by Fanny Fern the very acme of female felicity; her hands familiar with the broom or light garden hoe, as occasion may demand: in fact, equal to the performance of as many things as the "Model Editor." Now, has this country widow time or inclination to be gay and dashing? But enough of this subject, which I had no intention to elaborate so far.

I wish I had the epistolary gift of some folks I could name, how glowingly I might paint the glorious beauties of the country hereabouts—the grand old forest clothed in green of every shade that can bring pleasure or relief to the eye—the finest blue-grass, undulating in the breeze like the bosom of a crystal lake just rippled by the perfumed breath of morning—everything teeming with life; but no noise or bustle—no contention for place. The plow-boy's whistle echoing from hill to dale—a heart gushing melody never equaled yet save by the mocking bird's matin song of joy and love above the nest of her young. But to enjoy the country in all its heaven-inspiring thanks to the Giver of all Good, see it in a midsummer night, flooded

Democratic Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Democracy of the Third and Fourth Wards, at H. Denhard's, corner of First and Jefferson streets, for the purpose of organizing the party, on Wednesday next, at eight o'clock, P. M. A general attendance is requested. Come one, come all, and put the ball in motion.

☞ We need not remind our readers that to-day is the FOURTH OF JULY—the nation's anniversary. Eighty-two years ago the Declaration of Independence was issued. Few now live that can remember the day; perhaps none who could at that time feel the importance of the event. But the result has made the day memorable; and it will stand as the great day of the calendar in all coming time. This is also the Sabbath. The festivities of the day are postponed; but it may be none the less appropriately remembered. Whilst it is a day of divine worship, none who value civil and religious liberty will forget to return thanks to the God of nations for the glorious recollections of the Fourth of July.

This day eighty-two years ago the document, which we take it for granted all have read, was adopted by our Continental Congress. The committee appointed to prepare it consisted of Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, John Adams, of Massachusetts, Benjamin Franklin, of Pennsylvania, Roger Sherman, of Connecticut, and Robert R. Livingston, of New York. It was written by Jefferson, and first shown to Adams and Franklin, who made a few useful alterations; and reported by the committee to Congress without further change. Some modifications were made by Congress, and the document was sent forth on its world-wide mission. It was worthy of the cause; for it expressed the sentiments of a nation's heart. Its date is the day of a nation's birth; and this anniversary will only become more and more appreciated, as the power grows which sprung into being on the fourth of July, 1776.

☞ The editor of the Journal has had great experience in party politics, and understands all the tricks of the trade; but he ought, from his position and talent, to leave some things to other people, who don't know any better than to use them. Yesterday morning he had a long article on Democratic economy. Inserted in it was a row of figures, giving the expenditures of the federal government from 1849 to 1858, inclusive; showing a regular increase, during that time, from about forty to eighty million dollars. The expenditures of 1858, he guesses at, of course, more or less.

About 1840, the expenditures of the Commonwealth of Kentucky were about one hundred and forty thousand dollars. They ran up under the rule of the editor's party to near six hundred thousand dollars, in 1855. We might, if we chose to waste the time, ink, and paper, give a column of figures, to show the monstrous corruption and extravagance of the powers that were, in the meantime.

Sensible men turn away with disgust at such demagoguery. They will inquire, not into the amount spent, but for what objects it was spent. When money is wasted, it is proper to show how it was done; and then it is a legitimate charge against the authors of the profligacy; but if money is spent on proper and necessary objects, and no more than is necessary for a valuable purpose, there is nothing in the amount. Every one knows the extent of our area, and the multiplicity of interests, since 1849, in this country; and the enhanced price of produce and wages. Put down the items of expense, and examine each one, and show what can be omitted; and then make a charge of extravagance, if it be not omitted. Committees of Congress, and the departments at Washington, toil over items during the whole session of Congress, and make no progress in reform. The cry of reform usually comes from the party whose representatives voted for every appropriation, and wanted more.

The people understand this cry for retrenchment; and these mighty columns of figures. It is usually all demagoguery, and nothing else. The use of figures, of yesterday, was intended to exhibit the great economy of Mr. Fillmore's administration; and yet Polk's administration carried on the Mexican war with as small an expenditure as Mr. Fillmore required in time of peace.

But, in truth, Mr. Fillmore didn't regulate the expenses of his administration. During his whole term there was a Democratic Congress that controlled all the expenses; nor could Mr. Fillmore, or any other President, use a dollar that was not appropriated by Congress; and he used all that was appropriated. "But," says the editor of the Journal, "Mr. Fillmore left a surplus in the treasury, and left a surplus that was not exhausted even at the end of the extravagant Pierce administration."

Now it is well known, that during Mr. Pierce's administration there were three or four times as much of the national debt paid, as was paid during Mr. Fillmore's, and there was twice as much left in the treasury. So ends all this gammon about extravagant expenditures. The truth is, the Committees of Ways and Means are generally composed of men of all parties; and they are anxious to save money, and would be much obliged to the editor of the Journal if he will, in the exercise of his financial skill, point out where retrenchment can be made. After a committee has reduced expenses as much as possible, their labors go to the House, and there the great advocates of retrenchment manage to add to the list of millions by thrusting in other objects; and then go home to rail at extravagance. The expenditures are regulated by the general policy of the country. If the editor of the Journal, with his protection, his distribution schemes, his American system, &c., had had their way, the federal government would have been bankrupt by this time.

☞ The editor of the Journal wants to know what we have done with "old Buck's" likeness, that so long hung upon the walls in the Democrat office. We'll tell him. It is filed away with the volumes of the Louisville Journal, and we occupy the place where it hung with live matter—a beautiful map of Jefferson county.

The editor should not object to its removal, when we inform him that "old Buck" and the old files of the Journal occupy the same place. We keep both under lock and key—and occasionally turn them over.

☞ The two nominees of the office-holders' Convention, in Illinois, were both, in 1854, violent opponents of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and aided the Black Republicans against the Democracy that year. They intend to do the Black Republicans still better service this year. We may expect to see not only the Kansas bill, but the Cincinnati platform, entirely repudiated by this faction before the canvass is over.

☞ H. C. Wright, one of the wild animals at the Rutland menagerie, said he was always glad to take pains to do on Sunday what the Church said he should not do. Well, the Church says he ought not to commit suicide on Sunday; now let him be glad to take pains to do it.

☞ There was a very unsatisfactory Railroad Convention held at Buffalo, on the 30th of June. Honorable gentlemen charged each other with not keeping their engagements. The accused demanded proof, and the Convention ended as it began.

☞ The Cincinnati Commercial man asks the editor of the Louisville Journal if there was not something like a coincidence in the meeting of the Free-Love Convention, the other day, at Rutland. What under the stars does the fellow mean? 'A coincidence!

THE CITY.

THE CIRCUS.—The tent was the great center of attraction yesterday afternoon and last night, and will be to-morrow evening and night.

☞ Chapman's Varieties, in New Albany, is doing a good business—drawing full and fashionable houses.

☞ After the little sprinkle we had yesterday evening, a cool breeze sprang up from the north that was quite refreshing, and under the influence of which the mercury in our thermometer fell four degrees.

RAIN.—About 5 o'clock last evening a storm came up, which for a few moments cooled the air; while a few drops of rain fell, but not enough to lay the dust in the streets.

NO PAPER TUESDAY.—Our printers are about as patriotic as other people, and wish to celebrate the Fourth, which they will do on Monday. Consequently we shall issue no paper Tuesday morning.

☞ We are indebted to our friend Palacio, under the Galt House, for some specimens of his imported cigars. They are what they are represented to be—real Havana. If you wan a lucious "smoke, get one of P's." best.

☞ An excursion train for Muldrough's Hill, over the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, will leave the city to-morrow morning at 7½ o'clock. Fare for the trip one dollar. This is a fine opportunity to spend the holiday in the woods, and see the progress of this great work.

☞ Our old friend, Mr. Robert Sadler, who has been across the ocean, reached our city on Friday evening in less than fourteen days since he left Liverpool! This is traveling with a rush.

RELIGIOUS NOTICE.—Rev. G. W. Smiley will preach in Sehon Chapel this Sabbath, 4th of July, at the usual hours. At 11 o'clock A. M., he will deliver an appropriate discourse. Several of the Military Companies of the city will be present by special invitation. Seats free.

☞ Webster's Gallery seems to be a great place of resort for the elite of our city, as well as strangers, who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing the finest collection of Photographic pictures in the western country. The Websters stand among the very best in their profession.

PARRAQUETTE.—The sale of lots in Parraquette addition to Shepherdsville, by S. G. Henry & Co., comes off on Tuesday afternoon, 6th inst. Terms only $5 cash, and $5 a month, per lot. Cars leave Nashville depot at 2: 15 for the sale. Seats free.

MADAME BLANCHE.—This lady physician adds to her reputation week after week. Her office is almost besieged by patieuts who go to try the efficacy of her treatment. We have not yet heard of a case undertaken by her in which she has not been successful in effecting a cure.

☞ Jones (not Brown nor Smith), we mean J. PAUL JONES, of the far-famed "Metropolitan Cigar Store," on Third street, between Jefferson and Green, has just received a new lot of goods in his line. We can recommend this establishment, especially to the lovers of choice Havana cigars and good chewing and smoking tobacco, as the place where they can be suited to their entire satisfaction.

BROWDER'S SCHOOL.—We desire again to call attention to Mr. Browder's Vacation School, which will open next Tuesday morning. It may not be generally known, but is a fact, that the teachers in the city schools have received no salaries since the last of last January, and all know that they must stand in need of the cash. Mr. Browder has had several years' experience as a teacher, and is popular and efficient. Parents and guardians, who wish their children prepared by fall to enter advanced classes, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Browder.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION AND CELEBRATION AT ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE, BARDSTOWN.—We are requested to state that the annual exhibition of St. Joseph's College, Bardstown, together with the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, will take place at the said institution on Monday, July 5th. The "Union Cadets," headed by the famous New Albany Silver Band, will parade on the occasion, and the degree of LL. D. will be conferred on Gov. R. L. Wickliffe, of Louisiana, and Hon. Otho R. Singleton, member of Congress from Mississippi. The occasion will be one of much interest, and will, no doubt, attract a large number of visitors.

BALLOON ASCENSION.—Prof. Lynn's second ascension yesterday evening was even more successful than his first. The senior editor of the Journal tried to go up with him, but the Balloon wouldn't leave the ground with him in it; as soon as he descended, the Balloon arose beautifully and rapidly, and went off in a northeasterly direction.

P. S. Since writing the above, we learn by a friend in on the cars last evening, that at half past six o'clock Prof. Lynn was east of Floydsburg, and appareutly a mile and a half high, going on rapidly. He left here at 5½ P. M.

REFRIGERATORS.—We call the utteution of our readers in town and country, to the advertisement of Mr. E. W. Macdonald. He has gained a reputation for his refrigerators beyond any other maker in the South. These refrigerators are no experiment; they have been in successful operation for upwards of ten years, to the gratification of those who have had them in use, as their certificates will show; and are now the most approved before the public. The improvements recently added, by which the most perfect ventilation is insured, a great saving of ice has been obtained, more frigid air produced and durability effected, certainly places them far in advance of anything ever offered for public patronage.

THEATER.—The audience was not so large last evening as we had hoped to see, but all were well pleased with the performances, to judge by the applause. Col. Wallace was called before the curtain at the close of the second piece. To-morrow evening is the last of the season, on which occasion the bill will include the Golden Farmer, John Jones, and Buried Alive. A good bill, and should draw a good house.

☞ During the storm of last Thursday, at Shardine's, near Oakland, a huge oak tree was struck by the lightning, and shattered into a thousand fragments—the fluid passed down through the stump, splitting it open, and into the earth, throwing up a cloud of dust, blinding in its effects, to a great hight.

DROWNED.—On Thursday evening last, two boys went into the river to bathe, near the foot of lower Fourth street. One of them, a son of Stepheu Sessions, about ten years of age, being unable to swim, got beyond his depth, and was drowned. His body has not yet been found.—Columbus (O.) Fact, 2d.

DIED,

In this city, on the 3d inst., JOHN TEVIS, infant son of Mary Heller, and John T. Gallagher, aged 1 months and two weeks.

His funeral will take place on this (Sunday) evening, at 4½ o'clock, from the residence of William P. Benedict, on Walnut street, between Fourth and Fifth. The friends of the family are requested to attend.

Pictures for Seven Cents!

AT THE STAR GALLERY, NO. 72 Fourth street, you can get an Ambrotype made on a Glass Plate, two by two-and-a-half inches, for SEVEN CENTS; the same, with the usual Brass Trimmings, for FIFTEEN CENTS; and with Case, for TWENTY CENTS. For FIFTEEN-FIFTEEN CENTS, you can get a Brass Photograph, secured between Two Glass Plates of the above size; and without Case, for TWENTY CENTS. Put up in the style of the Star Gallery, and examined by scientific Chemists, they will unhesitatingly be pronounced more durable than the best Oil Colored Photographs; and, without Cases, are just the very thing to make up a handsome Family or School Collection, or be sent as an inducement or other fancy ground, and suitably framed to hang up.

Pictures of all kinds are gotten up and sold with as fine Frames and Cases as the market affords, the prices of which range from one to two hundred per cent lower than persons have been and are charged for the same, and then had to lay their Pictures aside and come to the Star Gallery to get a Star Picture put into their already dear-purchased Case.

Great Cure after the Physicians had Failed.

RUSSELLVILLE, OHIO, Jan. 10, 1855.

Dr. C. M. Jackson—Dear Sir: We would inform you that we are out of Hoofland's German Bitters, which are very ready sale. One of our neighbors has been doctoring for some time (we think about two years), with all the doctors in the country, but all of no avail. He looked as much like a dead man going about as anything we can compare him to. His disease appeared to be an overflowing of the gall. With hard persuasion we prevailed on him to try your Bitters, with the promise to him, if it did no good, we would charge him nothing for it, provided he took six bottles according to the directions, which he has done, and is now entirely cured, and has become a well man. This cure has created a great sale in this neighborhood.

Respectfully, EDWARDS & BROWN.

Holloway's Ointment.

THE bane of Scrofula, the King's Evil of our ancestors, has no foe like this detergent and eradicating salve. It healing qualities are unequaled in the cure of Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, Sore Breasts, and the Scald-Head, and Ring-Worm, the enemies of the nursery. It renews the coating of the skin, and leaves no trace behind of former disfigurement.

Fistula in Ano Cured in Eighteen Days.

I KNOW THIS TO BE TRUE, because it is my own case. I have been for a long time afflicted sorely with this abhorrent disease. The best medical aid had been employed to no useful purpose. I met with Dr. Price of this city, and told him my condition. After examination, he told me he could cure me, and I consented to making a trial, and he did so. He has used no knife, no ligature; nor has he used any other agonizing astringent means. In eighteen days I am well. I can be found at my house of business, on Market street, where all who seek further information can see me.

April 14, 1858. JOSEPH YOUSE.

☞ I propose to cure Cancer, Scrofula, Secondary Syphilis in all its aggravated forms, Chronic Sore Eyes, Chronic Diarrhœa, and Fistula in Ano. No cure no pay for medicine and attention. I keep the genuine PRICE PILL for sale.

For the next two months the Madame can be found at her office from 6 to 9, A. M.; the remainder of the day she can be found at her residence, on the Bardstown turnpike, three miles from the city, at the Cedar Grove Her name is at the gate. d&w

TO CONSUMPTIVE INVALIDS.—We are requested to say, that owing to the number of invalids who have written to Dr. Flower, and are on their way to this city in order to consult him, that Dr. F. has returned to Louisville, Kentucky, and will remain at his office, on the corner of Centre and Green, during the summer months. He is desirous of establishing a permanent office in this city. His peculiar theory is rapidly gaining for him a successful practice. He offers as usual, consultations free to all. d&w

LABOR-SAVING MACHINE.—The most important to the public generally is a Washing Machine, manufactured by R. D. Porter & Co., of this city. These machines have been tried by a large number of our best citizens, and have given satisfaction to every one who has used them. The machines are cheap, simple, durable, and not liable to get out of order. A child of ten years can understand and work one of them. It is a great saving of time and labor; it does not rub off the buttons, or injure the finest fabric in washing; it will wash anything from a pocket-handerchief to the largest size bed quilt, and do the work quick, and do it well. In proof of the above, we can refer to a large number of highly respectable persons who now have the machine in use, and in addition to this, give any one the privilege of trying the machine before purchasing.

TO THE LADIES.—We take pleasure in inviting the attention of ladies to the large and handsome stock of fancy dry goods now on exhibition at the store of G. B. Tabb, corner of Fourth and Market streets. He has just received, by express, direct from the largest importing houses in New York, a splendid assortment of silk robes; grenadine, organdie, and barege robes; robe a'quille in tissue; barege and silk lace mantles (new style); lace points, barege shawls and circulars, scarfs, parasols, lace mitts, embroidered crape, jaconet, and organdie muslins; empress stripes for traveling dresses; bayadere lusters; lace setts and collars; embroidered handkerchiefs, fans, &c., &c. We feel safe in saying that the stock of goods at this house, in point of elegance and variety, is unequaled by that of any other Southern or Western house. We are requested to invite persons visiting the city, with a view to making purchases, to examine the goods at this house before purchasing elsewhere. Corner Fourth and Market streets. m9 dtf

☞ In view of the recent heavy and frequent rains, speculative minds have predicted a sickly season following, and nothing to prevent its coming. This, however, should not alarm a suffering humanity, for there exists in all cases of complaints natural causes, and hence the proper physical remedies, if such at all are available; yet a little precaution in this direction will not be amiss, and we cheerfully recommend the gentlemen and youths' wear, to be had at the MAMMOTH CLOTHING DEPOT, northeast corner of Fourth and Market streets, as being adapted for all occasions and the more extremities of the weather—a most effectual preventive in its way. je15dtf

Our Springs Gossip.

A Stunning Item—Mr. Rarey—Alphabet James—Pegasus—The Spur of Genius—The Muses—The Realms of Poesy, &c., &c.

Messrs. EDITORS: To the great disappointment, and, no doubt, regret of your "local," who has missed a stunning item, we still survive—having miraculously escaped with a slight contusion upon the head. Never will we mount Pegasus again—never! Had we not, with prophetic zeal, taken the precaution to insure our life, there would undoubtedly be a funeral; for no other medium could have preserved the valuable prolongation of your adventurous correspondent. Why has not Rarey undertaken to subdue the fiery spirit of this irascible beast, so that all might rack him through the flowery fields of Poesy? It would render him immortal. Oceans of ink would be exhausted by new-fledged votaries in panegyric praise; and his memory mellifluously borne down to posterity upon seas of wondering eulogies. But, judging from experience, we fear the attempt would terminate a little too *rare-y.

Alphabet James mounts two horses, and merrily canters over his fine, picturesque scenery, without any apparent effort or intimidation; but then, he knows them. Both have been "taken through" in every clime—at all hours, under every circumstance—during all kinds of weather; besides enduring innumerable deaths and resuscitations; until he must be perfectly acquainted with every trick, habit, or feat in which they indulge: in fact, he has reduced them to mere hobbies. Not so, however, with your correspondent and that favorite steed of the Muses; but,

"We could a tale unfold," etc.

If you remember, it was recklessly asserted in our last, that we proposed to mount Pegasus in this number. Oh! ye shade of Phœbus and spirit of aspiring Phæton; ye who suffered the penance of arrogant ambition; why did ye not interpose an admonitory interdiction? But it was destiny; and the following is a reliable description of the dire decree, so far as remembered: We advocate the theory of imitation in all things, provided our models are selected from the best and capable of improvement. Giotto and Cimabue led Da Vinci; Ennius and Homer, Virgil; Virgil, Dante; Momus, your correspondent; and so on through every school from remote ages to the present century. Originality is but a forgotten copy; and the greatest perfection is only attained by combining the choice performances of all into one grand chef-d'œuvre. With this idea ingrafted upon our mind, we resolved to follow the example of illustrious predecessors, and naturally chose that forte which was most congenial to our taste. Byron took gin; we took gin. Burns, brandy; tried brandy; and so on through the merry wine of Moore, whisky of Maginn, etc., until we came to the Glenlivet of North, where we paused, as it was not included in our landlord's catalogue. Feeling the longed for inspiration beginning to steal over our enraptured senses, and determined to do or to die, we followed with the miscellaneous varieties of Poe, Coleridge, and the mass, and then took our drink, "any-thing-we can-get." Amply inspired for the encounter, we invoked the muses, and ordered Pegasus to be brought forward. As they led him up, we gazed palsied with astonishment. Could this poor hack, reduced to a mere skeleton, be the winged steed which had borne the genius of a Shakspeare, Byron, Milton, and their satellites through the realms of poetry? Alas,

"'Tis true, 'tis pity; pet pity 'tis, 'tis true."

His sunken eyes, protruding ribs, and slow spiritless pace, painfully exhibited the extent to which he had been abused; and with a feeling of compassion, we were about to decline the contest, when the swan-like Polyhymnia advanced, and in an alluring voice, which slightly lisped, she sweetly speculated upon the appearance of her new votary. "Olla podrida!" "Cacoethes scribendi!" "Pshaw!" said the merry Thalia, "Boutez en avant; plus on est de fous, plus on rit." Here we modestly interposed with a polite hem! and facetiously informing them that we only spoke forty-three languages, stated our boundless obligations if they would condescend to finish in Chaldee, Hottentot, or High-Dutch. With a smile of affable complacency, she continued: "Vot for you wants to ride Bigotus? Ish you not vorse dan petter ash you ish? But dare ish dumthing in your eye (Thalia gently sighed, 'a little old rye') vich tells me, 'goes in and vin.'" Delighted with the sly permission which was implied in this elegant apostrophe, we expressed our excruciating regrets at not being enabled to properly tender the thanks that bounded within the uncomeatable recesses of our heart, and prepared for the fruition of our most ecstatic hopes.

Polyhymnia gracefully slid back to her sister Castalides, who were posed around in various attitudes, forming an allegorical group. Clio, scroll in hand, was prepared to chronicle the eventful deed for the benefit of posterity. Urania, gazing unessily, swept the heavens, wondering if any "particular star" was endangered by the proposed ascent. Terpsichore, with a pliant leap, bounded over the back of Pegasus, and lithely sinking her supple form to the "Crackovien Twist," gracefully extended the stirrup. Thalia laughed at the sad melancholy of Melpomene, who, musing, pondered over the pensive Erato. The other two we have forgotten, and will suppose them in the back-ground, so as to render the picture more classically artistic.

Burning to emulate, and inspired by their presence, we mounted, grasped the enchanted rein, and—"didn't budge." Pegasus moved not! Elevating our pedal extremity, we were about to plunge it into his quivering side, when a shriek from the horror-stricken Polyhymnia reminded us that the an*mule* was controlled by mental, and not physical force. Had recourse to the spur of genius, and took a little more Byron. Pegasus bluked! Whipt one down "all around," when, Ohe!—we were off.

The dull earth receded from our feet, Parnassus rose, towering before us in all the magnificence of its grandeur, and we rode at a contemplative trot through the long vistas which led to its golden base. Hope came first, and shouted "On! !!" in a tone which drowned the clamor of Despair. Charity forewarned us of the dangers and disappointments on the route. "Though all appear so smooth and beautiful, be ever wary and upon your guard. Hearken not to the insidious flattery of emulating friends, for they beget vanity; neither succumb to the harsh criticisms of paid hirelings. (A soft sigh ruffled the ambrosial air. It was the spirit of poor Keatts.) Beware of that gaudy cloud, so attractive in outward form—it is Idleness. All within is misery and gloom. Passing that, you enter into the realms of Virtue and Happiness. Be guided by the one to enjoy the other. Should you stray from the correct path, call on Perseverance; she will lead you from the dark labyrinths into which Ignorance or Vanity may have led you. The rest is dependent upon your own efforts. May success attend you."

Thanking her, we proceeded to progress. Cupid was loafing in the bower of Passion daintily sucking a comb of the honey of Hoebla. Sentiment, seated upon a broken obelisk, was pensively inhaling the fragrance of the violets of Proestum. Genius was indulging in a siesta, which, as a cross-eyed Satyr maliciously remarked, had not been interrupted during the present century. Prose, entranced, was gazing into the ethereal eye of Poetry, which was supposed to have a flaw in it. The semblances of every thought, interspersed with a thousand creations of the fancy, roamed in all directions, and crowded in distinct shapes upon the startled imagination; but our goal was onward, these but the springs which flowed into the fountain of inspiration. The Temple of Fame rose in majestic grandeur upon the highest pinnacle of Parnassus; the exultant shouts and joyous acclamations of an appreciative and worshiping throng, bidding us "On to conquest!" were borne in mellifluous strains to our senses; but our utmost efforts were unavailing; we drew no nearer the glorious illusion. The closer we should have been by arithmetical computation, the further we were off; and we paused to contemplate the strange phenomenon. Alas! our hesitation was our downfall. Charity, through a mistaken kindness, had intentionally neglected to inform us of the doom of Ignorance and Egotism. We had skimmed over the fields of poesy; noted their beauty; inhaled their fragrance, and experienced a sensation of joyous delight at their appearance; but lacked the ability to blend the congruous fantasies into one congenial whole. Pegasus, restive at our tardiness, elevated his heels, and we fell from our exalted height into the lurid lake of Oblivion. Dark forms, remarkable for their cadaverous features and seedy garments, flitted through the lethean waters, calling upon the entire heathen mythology to curse, kill, and exterminate all critics, publishers, publics, and everything else but their own stupid bigotry. From this out the deponeth sayeth——

Some two hours after the above proceedings, one of the domestics was engaged in pouring water upon somebody's head; but whether in imitation of Crabbe, or not, we do not remember. We regret that all your readers cannot enjoy the humorous illustrations which we indorse of his remarkable adventure; but we tender one for the benefit of that knock-eyed, cross-kneed composer, trusting that the "fat" will not make him lean. You need not labor under any serious apprehensions; from this out we forswear "gin." Yours, etc., AVIS.

HYACINTH SPRINGS.

*For the enlightenment of our readers, we would state, that this is intended for a pun. It is rather "far-fetched"—coming from England—and intimates the supposed bodily condition of Mr. Rarey after a "cloudy" fall. That is, nearly raw—rare-y! Do you perceive? AVIS.

RIVER INTELLIGENCE.

☞ All kinds of Steamboat Printing neatly and expeditiously done at this office. Terms reasonable.

RIVER AND WEATHER.—The river was swelling a little last evening, with 5 feet water in the canal, by the mark. Yesterday was hot, although a cool breeze prevailed most of the day.

BUSINESS.—The Diana was taking on a very fair trip of freight yesterday, and will go out this morning with a good load.

The Meteor left for St. Louis with a rather slim freight.

The Fred Trow and Monarch succeeded in getting off the bar yesterday, and went on their way rejoicing.

The Telegraph, from Cincinnati, brought in 82 bdls railroad chairs, 30 bales sheeting, 4 ice chests, 1,100 bdls paper, 50 tons pig iron, 278 sks oats, 4 cks lead pipes, 30 bxs cheese, 20 doz washboards. Returned with a fair passenger trip.

The Dove, from Kentucky river, brought in 65 coils rope, 27 bbls whisky, 34 pcs bagging, 25 bales mdze, 20 bgs rags, and 16 hhds tobacco.

☞ The St. Louis Democrat, of the 2d inst., says:

The river continues to fall about as fast as could be desired. The Fannie Lyon, from Davenport, reports the Upper Mississippi falling very fast, with only four feet ten inches on the lower rapids. The Illinois is falling and still at a good height. The Missouri is rising again, but will doubtless soon be subsiding once more. Although the sun was very hot, and the air almost insufferably sultry yesterday, there was a good deal of activity manifested on the landing. Business is improving; grain is reaching the river all along the Upper Mississippi, from the country, and there is an active supply for all the boats coming down. Freights are getting abundant for the Missouri, but passengers bound West are few and far between. The last two or three boats for the Missouri, were almost void of passengers.

The old steamer Keystone has been sold by Captain Symms to a gentleman of the Calloway Mining Company, and will probably be used for towing coal in the Missouri river. The price was $4,000.

We heard a rumor yesterday to the effect that the Granite State will soon be laid up for improvements, and that Capt. Ledwick will bring the fine steamer Jo Daviess from the Upper Mississippi, to take the place of the Granite State. Connected with this report is another, of a very important project, viz: that the Messrs. Ledwick, rich, influential, and enterprising men, will next early next year, a daily line of excellent boats from this port to ports on the Illinois. These steamers will be side-wheelers.

This project is not newly mooted. It has been spoken of a long time ago. The principal object intended to be attained by it, is the diverting of the principal freights and passengers, destined for the Upper Mississippi, to another route—via the Illinois river and railroads. The thing will doubtless be attempted, and may work a remarkable change. Time will unfold par leuare.

A young lady who was on the Pennsylvania at the time of the disaster, died yesterday on the Sioux City. She was about going up the Missouri river.

The Evening News of the same date says:

The Lucie May, from Dubuque, reports 5 feet on Upper Rapids, and 4½ feet on Lower, and still falling all the way down. She passed the R. F. Sass grounded on Gilbert's bar. The Illinois keeps falling steadily.

The impetus given to river business by favorable weather, in connection with abundant water, has had the effect of drawing several boats from temporary retirement, whilst others have been changing hands, and their usual lines of traffic

Freights are ruling very freely, and the levee presents a lively and increasing field of operations.

☞ The Cincinnati Commercial of yesterday says:

Captain James Cornaly arrived from Pittsburg last night. He says the marks there call for four feet, but there are not over fifteen inches and a half on Glass's Bar. The Commerce and Indian, with their barges, were hard aground on Beaver Shoals on Thursday. The Great West, Captain McCullough, left Pittsburg on Wednesday afternoon for St. Louis, with a nothing freight. She proceeded on to Raccoon, a little way below Beaver. There she met the Defender, and backed in order to make way for a passage. She ran out of the channel and struck square on some snag or other in the river bottom, which broke her "scag," causing her to take so much water that she sunk as far as she could in so short water. There are about three inches of water over the deck at low water, and there she lies. She is not a bad sunk, we believe, in the present state of the river. The accident occurred on Wednesday night. Captain Cornaly informs us she had all her freight out on the shore, and that she would return to Pittsburg for repairs as soon as raised.

The Landis has laid up in Licking river for the season.

We learn from the Natchez Courier that the gentlemen who were injured by the accident on board the Eclipse, will commence suit against her and attach her to the amount of $25,000

The Prairie Rose has been chartered for an excursion to the new town of Tull City. She leaves on Monday with several hundred of our Swiss and German citizens.

Leaving To-Day.

FOR CINCINNATI.—The Jacob Strader, Capt. Dittman's splendid packet, will leave at noon to-day for Cincinnati.

FOR NEW ORLEANS.—The new and swift steamer, Diana, in charge of Captain E. T. Sturgeon, Mr. O. L. Smith in the office, will leave Portland this morning at 10 o'clock for the Crescent City.

Steamboat Register.

SATURDAY, July 3.

ARRIVED—Telegraph, Cincinnati; Emma Dean, Carrollton; Diana, Kentucky River; Hickman, Cincinnati; Lucie May, [illegible].

DEPARTED—Telegraph, Cincinnati; Emma Dean Carrollton; Diana, Kentucky River; Arizona, Cincinnati, Memphis, St. Louis.

BY TELEGRAPH.

ST. LOUIS, July 3, P. M.—The river fell about 8 in. yesterday, and come to a stand about dark last night, but will probably swell a little to-day from rise in the Missouri, which is higher at St Joseph, than at any time this season. The upper Mississippi and Illinois continue to recede. The weather is cloudy, windy, and comfortably cool this morning. Thermometer indicated 100 in the shade.

PITTSBURG, July 3, P. M.—River 4 feet scant by the pier mark and falling. Weather cloudy with appearances of rain; mercury 94.

MATCH PLAYED BY TOWN BALLERS.—The Gymnast's Town Ball Club played another match yesterday afternoon, under a broiling sun, but did not suffer from the heat, a fine breeze prevailing in the valley. The Club played on the commons below Millcreek, deeming it more convenient than Newport. It will be seen from the subjoined report of scores that S. Robinson's side was beaten out of sight. Four innings were played by each side:

| J. B. CLAYPOOLE'S SIDE. | | S. ROBINSON'S SIDE. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| J. S. Claypoole | 22 runs. | S. Robinson | 3 runs. |
| B. O. M. DeBeck | 35 " | W. D. Bickman | 14 " |
| O. H. Hibben | 33 " | J. H. Taylor | 7 " |
| Wm. Lapham | 19 " | W. Smith | 13 " |
| W. L. Avery | 5 " | W. Whitaker | 12 " |
| T. S. Pierce | 22 " | E. A. Miller | 7 " |
| J. E. Booneville | 4 " | H. M. Perrin | 12 " |
| F. Laidham | 4 " | T. S. Jessup | 3 " |
| Total | 145 runs. | Total | 71 runs. |

Robinson was very unlucky in the selection of a portion of his side, not being posted on the points of the various players. There was not a single number one catcher in his party, and only two or three fair fieldsmen. Claypoole had a large share of the best players in the Club. We understand that the Club designs to challenge the Excelsior Town Ballers to a grand public trial of skill.—Cin. Com.

THE FREE LOVE CONVENTION.—A correspondent tells all about the personnel of the shining lights of the ism Convention in Vermont. The ablest among the female leaders who appeared was Mrs. Eliza W. Farnham, well known to New York audiences, as a strong advocate of woman's rights. In person, tall, spare, and angular. Her hair and eyes are black, her nose aquiline, bestridden by a pair of gold spectacles. She is an Eastern woman, and has been addicted to reforms for many years; she was once Matron in the State Prison at Sing-Sing. Her style of speaking is dull and monotonous, with scarcely an inflection of the voice. Mrs. F. is a widow. Mrs. F. D. Gate, from St. Louis, is probably 70, a large, heavy woman, with hair nearly white, arranged in cork-screw curls. She has eight children, some of them grown up. This lady has made some fair poetry in her earlier years. Mrs. Julia Branch, of New York, is an out-and-out, practical, avowed and undaunted "Free Lover," and rather glories in the title. Marriage she considers a prodigious nuisance, and husbands an article to be done away with. Mrs. Branch, though not pretty, has something peculiarly interesting in her appearance. She is a smart and ready writer, but not a fluent speaker. She has good teeth, and exhibits them to advantage when she laughs—which she does frequently. Her age is possibly 29; her person slight, and her wardrobe negligé. She is a widow.

COLLISION ON THE CENTRAL OHIO RAILROAD. Yesterday morning the passenger train on the C. O. R. R., due here at six A. M., came into collision at Pleasant Valley with the passenger train going east, which should have been on the "turn out" in time to permit the other train to pass without stopping; but being a little behind time, the engine and tender had just left the main track when the other train ran into the baggage car, entirely demolishing it and doing slight injury to several other cars. Fortunately, no one was hurt.

Shocking Scene in Philadelphia—Three Murders in One Night.

No less than three murders were committed in the city of Philadelphia and vicinity on Monday night. We quote from the newspapers as follows:

WIFE MURDER.

Edwin Pembrobe and Anna, his wife, who reside in a two-story frame house on Twenty-Third street, above Callowhill, got into a quarrel during the afternoon. Both parties had been drinking and at the time the husband came home, about three o'clock, he found his wife lying on a bench, at the front door. Words passed between the two in reference to her exposing herself, and finally blows were struck. The quarrel soon ended, but was renewed again about five o'clock, at which time Edwin, it was alleged, kicked his wife in the stomach so severely that she died therefrom shortly after, though no mark of violence could be discovered on her body.

ROW AND HOMICIDE ON A STEAMBOAT.

About half past seven o'clock, a shocking murder occurred on board the steamer Peytona, while on her return from Gloucester. The Inquirer says:

A general row occurred among a crowd of "Roughs" in regard to an insult which it is alleged one of them offered to a woman of disreputable character. About twenty persons were engaged in the melee, one or two of them using dirks, and others using billies and other instruments of offense and defense upon which they could lay their hands. During the riot three or four persons were very seriously injured. One person had his nose broken, three were very seriously injured about the head, and another young man named Geo. Neall, sailmaker, at Race street wharf, better known as "Bucky Neall," received a fatal stab in the left side. The injured man was picked up and laid on a bench, where he died in a few minutes.

The alleged perpetrator of the act is a man named Wm. Murphy, who keeps a drinking house called the First Ward Hotel. Immediately upon ascertaining the result of the affray he leaped overboard and was rescued by a fishing boat, by which he was set ashore on the Pennsylvania side and made his escape.

A MEMBER OF THE SHIFLER HOSE COMPANY SHOT DEAD.

A fire had broken out in the basement of the Alleghany House, in Market street, above Ninth, about midnight. A number of fire companies hastened to the spot, among them the Moyamensing. As these companies come together at Eight and Market streets, shots were fired, almost simultaneously, from revolving pistols. Two of the shots took effect. One pierced the arm of a small boy on the sidewalk, the other crashed through the skull of a young man named Samuel Carrs, a member of the Shiffler Hose, killing him almost instantly. The unfortunate young man was carried into a drug store at Eighth and Arch streets, where he breathed out his last breath, surrounded by his comrades. While this was going on the fire was extinguished with but trifling damage.

Our Special Washington Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 29, 1858.

Notwithstanding all the assurances to the contrary, the question in regard to the right of search by British cruisers at sea is not settled by Lord Malmesbury's recent dispatch to Lord Napier, as I learn from an excellent authority; and there is a difference of opinion in the Cabinet as to the meaning of its language, as I have before informed you. The president thinks the dispatch covers all the points, while Gen. Cass holds to the belief that it does not concede anything real, nor settle the true question so long at issue between the two governments. Whenever the dispatch of Lord Malmesbury is published, it will be seen that the whole thing is a blind to secure the delay.

No dispatches have arrived here from Colonel Steptoe. The information already published is from others, and is reliable.

I understand General Harney is to be recalled from the Utah expedition and sent to command against the Indians in Oregon. Letters from Governor McMullen to Governor Stevens, and from army officers to the War Department, speak of Col. Steptoe's defeat. It is believed he was surprised in the attack made on him, or that the efficient, though small, force under his command, would have defeated fifteen hundred Indians. The Department apprehends a sanguinary contest with the tribes in Oregon. Part of the army for Utah will be sent on this service.

The report in part of the New York press that the President had determined to take possession of San Juan del Norte, and that Lord Napier approved such a course, is not true. The President has resolved, however, that the Nicaragua Transit route shall be opened. The trickery of the Nicaraguan government, or other officials, or the scheming of the steamship company monopolists, will not be suffered to prevent the free passage of that important route. I understand there is an agreement between the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and Commodore Vanderbilt with reference to the Nicaragua route. This, doubtless, is to keep up the enormous profits taken from the pockets of California passengers, and to perpetuate the monopoly. There is no doubt here but Vanderbilt's hundred thousand dollars has done the business effectually for Belly and Milland. Under such an arrangement, said to have been made with the Pacific Steamship Company, Vanderbilt could well afford to outbid the Frenchmen in buying the Martinez government.—N. Y. Herald, 30th,

TOM MARSHALL'S FIRST COMPOSITION.—A speaker at a school pic-nic at Detroit the other day related the following by way of illustration to the scholars of what energy and effort will accomplish. It was Tom Marshall's first composition at school. Tom was then an awkward, uulettered Kentucky boy. The theme of this, his first production, was "Habit," and was in the words following:

"Habit is a very bad habit. If a man gets into the habit of going to the tavern and getting drunk, he will go home and get as drunk as ever he was. TOM MARSHALL."

Tom Marshall is now widely known as a leading orator of the day.

A NOBLE ACT.—Wm. Walker, of New Jersey, one of the sufferers by the Pennsylvania disaster, was discharged yesterday by his physician, and started for his home, in company with officer Van Campen, whose self-sacrificing devotion to the wants of the sufferers is worthy of all praise; he proceeded to the steamer Alvin Adams, and applied for passage to Louisville. Capt. Lamb, the generous commander of the Adams, not only tendered him a free passage as far as his boat went, but assured him and Mr Van Campen that he would procure him a through ticket, without charge from Louisville to his home in New Jersey. This adds another to the many generous acts we have had the pleasure of chronicling since the occurrence of the sad disaster.

Memphis Bulletin.

☞ We clip the following items from the Indianapolis Journal, of July 3rd:

The Huntington Herald says that the large flouring mill of John Heiny, near Mt. Ætna, in that county, was destroyed by fire last week, with a large amount of flour and grain in it. The loss is estimated at six to eight thousand dollars.

The Lafayette Courier reports that a freight train on the Wabash Valley road ran over two horses, on a bridge near Huntington, on Thursday morning, throwing the engine off the track and severely injuring the engineer and fireman.

CRUELTY.—A family named Stearns, residing in Corinth, N. Y., were recently arrested for cruel treatment of a young girl, who was bound to them. Mrs. Stearns, besides ordering her husband and son to administer sundry severe whippings, had at one time tied the girl's hands behind her, and then, with a shoemaker's awl, pinned her up to the door by her ear! For this fiendish conduct the wretch was fined the sum of one dollar!

DEATH OF A VENERABLE WOMAN.—Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, the oldest person in the State of Maine, we presume, died in Durham, Cumberland county, on the 22d. The Maine papers say her age was nearly 115 years. She was born in 1743, thirty-three years before the Declaration of Independence. Till she was about 110 she possessed bodily vigor sufficient to enable her to work in the garden, an employment she took great delight in.

WORTH TRYING.—The French Gazette Medical states that charcoal has been accidentally discovered to be a cure for burns. By laying a piece of charcoal on the burn the pain subsides at once. By leaving it on for an hour the wound will be healed. It is certainly worth a trial.

GLANCE AT THE WORLD.

ST. LOUIS, July 2.—Between 12 and 2 o'clock yesterday, two hundred and seventy-five troops of second infantry, under command of Lieutenants Henderson, Connor, and Farrand, from Newport Barracks, arrived. They were transferred to the U. S steamer Mink, and immediately proceeded to Fort Randall.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The domestic difficulty between Capt. Henri De Reviere and the family of Col. Blount, of Mobile, has been transferred to this city. Col. Blount arrived in this city with his family early this week, and was followed by De Reviere yesterday. The two ladies suddenly disappeared, and, as they had not returned home up to a late hour last night, the friends of the family fear the worst. From a certificate of marriage given by Father Lafout, it would seem that De Reviere was already married.

PITTSBURG, July 3, M.—The Daily Union (Democratic) has been sold to J. B. Kennedy, and will hereafter be an independent, anti-tax morning penny paper, called the True Press. The Post is now the only daily Democratic paper published in Western Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—Colonel Kane, the peace negotiator, has for the last week been lying ill at his country place near this city. His disease is the bilious fever, contracted by exposure.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—There was a fire at 10 o'clock this morning, corner of Hercules and Calliope streets. Six dwellings destroyed. Loss $30,000.

Public Sale of a Farm and Tavern Stand.

ON FRIDAY, THE 19TH DAY OF July, 1858, at 1 o'clock, P. M., on the premises, I will sell, at public sale, a well-known Tavern Stand, situated in Jefferson county, on the Shelbyville Turnpike, 12 miles from Louisville.

The Farm contains 175 acres of land—145 acres good land, cleared, and in a high state of cultivation, the balance heavily timbered with choice timber (such as walnut, cherry, and sugar), which grow on fertile land. There are 50 acres which have been lately manured.

The House has been kept as a Tavern for the last 20 years, and commands a large run of custom. The farm is the headquarters for drovers, stock men, travelers, and movers. There is a Female Seminary within one mile, and the Rev. B. H. McCown's Mas Valley is within two miles of the Fairgrd three Churches within three miles. Six never failing springs and two wells that never fail on the Farm. There is a frame barn with large threshing floor, stalls, cribs, and cut-houses generally. The stable has capacity for 30 head of horses. The dwelling contains ten rooms, all comfortable and in good order.

TERMS—$2,500 cash; balance in three equal annual payments, without interest. A lien will be retained to secure the deferred payments

Possession will be given on the 10th of March, 1859.

An Apology for Having Loved Before.

They that never had the use
Of the grapes surprising juice,
To their first delicious cup
Ad their reason rouse up:
Neither do, nor care to know
Whether it is best or no.

So they are to love inclined,
Swayed by chance, not choice, or art,
To the first that's fair or kind,
Make a present of their heart.
It is not else that first we love,
By whom dying we approve.

To man, that as in th' evening made,
Stars gave the first delight,
Admiring in the gloomy shade
Those little drops of light:
Them at Aurora, whose fair hand
Removed them from the skies,
He gazing toward the east did stand,
She entertained his eyes.

But when the bright sun did appear,
All those he gan despise:
His wonder was determined there,
And could no higher rise.
He neither might nor wished to know
A more refulgent light:
(For that can name your beauties know)
Employed his utmost sight. Waller.

SERMON NO. 2.

BY A LAYMAN

If a man die, shall he live again?—Job. 14. 14.

Since the gates of Paradise closed behind the exiled transgressors of God's first commandment to man, no inquiry of deeper interest has ever presented itself to the human mind than that contained in our text.

What may be the nature of the existence that awaits us beyond the silent river, is but secondary in importance to the great question whether we shall so exist at all.

The clerical neophyte, fresh from the pages of Milton or Dante, may paint in word-pictures of weird beauty the Heaven he hopes to win; or lifting the sulphur-stained veil that shrouds the immortal lost, thrill the racked mind with the horrors of the infernal abyss. But when all is said, when fancy's wing grows weary, and reason once more assumes the reins, she asks again to-day, as she asked three thousand years ago, through the lips of the stricken and life-weary patriarch, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Not how, or when, or where, but shall he live at all?

In the white marble that human vanity, or surviving love, lifts above the perished wreck of our mortality, the first or the last milestone upon our path of being?

"Shall we be left, abandoned in the dust,
When fate, relenting, lets the flowers survive?
Shall nature's voice, to man alone unjust,
Bid him, though doomed to perish, hope to live?"

Are they gone from us forever, or shall we indeed see them again, the loved, the lost, the beautiful of earth?

Was that last fond look of the glazing eye, that last faint pressure of the clammy hand, the dread precursor of annihilation, or was it but the adieu au revoir of the half-emancipated spirit—a parting token wafted back from the other shore? Who shall answer for us this great question? Who shall solve for us the terrible mystery of the grave?

Go to yon gray-haired man of science, whose three score years have been spent in wringing from nature her most hidden secrets, and to whom the elements are as familiar friends. He has explored the arcana of the material universe; he has resolved the solid rocks that rib the earth into their primitive elements; he has chained the lightning of the clouds, and made it obedient to his will; he has marked the planets in their unresting course, and counted by seconds their periods of revolution. Can he not answer for us the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

The grave itself is not more dumb. His crucibles and tests may master the material elements, but the soul defies their analysis, and eludes their grasp.

Go then to that other student, who has made man his specialty in science; the physician who has walked side by side with death these many years, and watched the lamp go out in so many sockets. He can count you out by name each nerve and vein and artery of your body, and discourse you most learnedly of their functions. He can tell you why that heart, that but an hour ago battled so fiercely for life, has ceased to beat; why that once active brain, that fashioned thoughts for eternity, is now inert and dissolving matter. But the intelligence that spoke through that brain—that mysterious something which moved and guided the wondrous machine—has his curious scalpel detected its lurking place; ever laid bare its secret cell? Can he demonstrate that mind is not a mere property of matter, that ceases to exist when the heart ceases to throb? Nothing of all this does his physiology teach him. He may master the secrets of the abandoned mansion, but he finds nothing there written to tell him whither the tenant has flown, or whether there was indeed a tenant.

Turn we then from the physical to the mental student. Go thread with him the labyrinth in which the metaphysician has involved himself, in the vain attempt to comprehend his own intelligence, and analyse his own powers of analysis, and see if amid its tortuous windings you can catch no faint glimpse of the unknown land, or find no assured traces of immortality. You will look up from the tangled wilderness of thought in vain. The leaden cloud that canopies its sunless depths has no opening. The path you tread returns ever upon itself in ceaseless circlee.

The philosophy of antiquity wasted its strength in vain efforts to prove man's immortality. Though we may concede with Addison that Plato reasoned well, yet Plato doubted be hind the battlements his own giant intellect had reared. He exhausted the argument so far as mere human reason was capable of mastering the subject, but he stopped far short of demonstration. Cicero, bewildered in the mazes of Grecian philosophy, was never able to convince his own mind of the existence of that future for which he so yearned, and died with scarcely a hope, and certainly without an assurance of immortality. Socrates, it is true, with a faith more potent than ever was born of philosophy, quaffed the hemlock, in the full assurance that the death it would bring him was but the gateway to another state of existence. But his was the faith of instinct, not of reason. He believed, not in consequence of the teachings of philosophy, but in spite of them.

In all the past, philosophy and science have failed, hopelessly failed, to solve this great question of our destiny. There is nothing tangible in the subject for reason to grasp. There is no known fact or law or principle in nature upon which to rest the foundation of a synthetic argument. There is not in the material universe aught that bears the faintest resemblance to the Christian's idea of an immaterial soul, and therefore the analogist, who "reasons but from what he knows," has naught to rest his analogy upon.

The limited domain of our senses not only fails to find an analogy for the existence of an immaterial intelligence, but if such existence was demonstrated with mathematical certainty, what assurance can we gather from our material surroundings that its duration shall be measured only by the eternal years of God?

Change is written upon all things around us. Growth, maturity, decay, and dissolution is the unvarying routine. It applies alike to the ephemeral whose span of life is limited to a day, and to the gnarled oak that braves the tempests of a thousand years, and falls at last in the stillness of a summer's noon.

Nations spring up from unremembered beginnings, and grow, with passing ages, into power and greatness, and then as gradually and as surely decay, until only their name and the memory of their power remain.

We may read the rule written by nature's own hand upon the deep-laid foundations of the gray old earth that we inhabit.

The history of the lost Pleaid teaches us that the countless systems of worlds that stretch off into infinite space are not exempted from the application of this one great truth that nature teaches, that all things must have an end; and that a time will come in the far, far off future, when Sirius and Arcturus and Aldeberan, and all the innumbered host of stars that now dust the heavens as the glittering sands of the Pacific dust its shores, will have ceased to exist.

Whether, then, we reason from cause to effect, or seek the unknown from the analogies of the known, we are alike at fault. Nature has no analogy for immortality.

To unaided human reason death is an eternal sleep, from which there is no awakening—a starless night, without the hope or promise of a morrow. Are we doomed, then, to wander blindly on to the end, unknowing what awaits us when "life's fitful fever is over?" Shines there no light from the unknown land of a purer, holier ray than reason, and by which we may read our future? Comes there no voice from other spheres to tell us that "though a man die, he shall live again!"

Nature is silent, but nature's God has spoken. Man himself, unaided by Revelation, could never have conceived the idea of an immortal and immaterial spirit—an undying soul that shall outlive the stars, and be but on the threshold of its existence when the material worlds that now fill infinite space shall have run their appointed course, and given place to newer worlds and brighter suns.

There are but two sources from which the human mind derives its ideas—our external senses and Divine Revelation. The intellect of man never yet originated an idea that could not be traced to the teachings of our senses. Let him who doubts this, test it by the effort to conceive a sixth sense, differing as totally from our five known senses as they differ from each other. The individual, blind and deaf from his birth, can never originate the faintest conception of sound or color; he cannot even comprehend them when described to him.

The painter may throw upon the canvas scenes that eye never witnessed; but he does not create, he only combines. The sculptor who fashioned the Sphynx copied from no model in nature, yet his work was but a combination of ideas derived from his senses. The fabled Centaur never was tangible to the eye, but the fancy that first conceived its existence had but to combine two ideas familiar to his vision. Take, for example, the poem of Milton—great alike in conception and execution. Surely, if ever man lived who could have overleaped the barrier of material impressions, John Milton was that man; and if ever subject gave scope for such an effort, it is to be found in Paradise Lost. Yet there is not a thought in all its boundless wealth of imagination that had not its birth in the senses—that cannot be traced directly to their teachings.

It is a truth that admits of no cavil—self-evident to every man who can or will think—that all our ideas are derived from combinations received directly from the material universe around us.

But from what combination of material ideas, from what teachings of our external senses, could the mental sculptor have ever fashioned an immaterial soul? Yet we find the belief in man's immortality universal. From the red Indian, whose humble heaven is "in depth of woods embraced," up to the learned prelate, who can measure you by rule and line the porphyry walls of the New Jernsalem, all men everywhere have, with stronger or weaker degrees of faith, the belief, or at least the hope, that if a man die, he shall live again.

But I have shown that man could never have originated the idea. It could have come from God alone, and coming from him, it must be true. The materialist denies the existence of the soul, because he can find no analogy in nature for such a state of being; but the very arguments upon which he relies, while they sustain his preuises, reach far beyond his short-sighted conclusions, and prove that man, guided by the analogies of material nature, could never have conceived the belief or given shape to the idea of an immaterial being.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" God himself has answered the question as only Omniscience could answer it. Man's immortality, once announced to man—the idea once presented to his mind—the soul, with all the deathless instincts of its nature, recognizes at once its truth, and asking no evidence to sustain, defies analogy to overturn its faith.

All great truths are self-evident when once discovered and announced. The world gazed for ages upon the revolving planets, and noted the changing seasons, without a dream that our earth was not the center around which the universe revolved in fact as it did in appearance; but the theory of the Copernican system, once announced, became self-evident, and the wonder now is that man should not have always recognized its truth. Ages hence, when those years shall have faded away into dim tradition, men will smile incredulously at the story of Galileo and his forced renunciation of the great truth he had announced and proved.

"If a man die, shall he live again?"—From the lips of the stricken patriarch who asked the question, we have the answer, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth—and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God:" or, as it is more correctly rendered, "After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God."

Yes, thou old soldier of the cross, thy faith has not been in vain; a few more years of earthly conflict, and faith will be lost in knowledge, and while weeping friends shall be smoothing those gray hairs upon your cold brow, and closing those once sightless eyes, you will be realizing the truth, that though a man die, he shall live again.

Yes, thou pale mourner, now bending for the last time to kiss those cold lips, though he has died, yet doth he live again.

Yes, too, thou man of sin, who hast made this world thy God, as surely as thou diest, so surely shalt thou live again. But when, or where, or how? Is it not well to pause and inquire?

Oh, the hope of meeting beyond the grave the loved ones who have perished by our side in the journey of life; without it, who would crave the boon of existence!

It is the exposure of the weary pilgrim of earth; waxing faint and dim, it may be, when the sky is bright above his head, but shining with an unfaltering ray when clouds and darkness rest upon his pathway.

What cares he for the darkness of the night; what heeds he the pelting of the storm, so long as that star is bright in the heavens above him.

He can brave unfalteringly the toils and cares and dangers of life, and at last lay his head upon his death-pillow, exclaiming with his last faltering breath, "Oh! Death, where is thy sting? Oh! Grave, where is thy victory?"

THE WIFE'S DOWER.

BY A RETIRED ATTORNEY.

Everybody who knew John Gordon, knew him to be one of the meanest and most contemptible men that ever was permitted to walk the earth. His brother Peter was not a whit better; so that it would appear that meanness ran in the blood of the family.

John was pretty well off, so far as this world's goods were concerned. His property was all invested in a building which had cost him about thirty thousand dollars. He did not marry till he was forty, probably from the fear of incurring unnecessary expense; and when, finally he did take a wife, it was only as he would have taken a housekeeper, a servant.

Mrs. Gordon was a poor woman, and had been obliged to work very hard for a living. Probably she married on purely prudential considerations, for she could not possibly have loved such an abortion of a man as John Gordon. She took good care of her husband, treated him better than he deserved, and was in every respect an obedient and faithful wife. All she received in return was the meager support her husband's house afforded.

When they had been married some three years John was taken sick, and lingered along for a year, during which time she was an excellent and devoted wife. Her whole aim seemed to be to discharge her duty to her lord with fidelity. She had made a bargain with him, and she performed her part of the contract with scrupulous exactness.

One day I heard that John Gordon was dead. It was a small loss to the community, and I could not think of pitying his wife, for her lot would certainly be ameliorated by his departure. She would be entitled to one-third of the income of the real estate, which, for a poor woman, as she had been, and having no luxurious tastes to gratify, would be a prince's stipend.

I neither thought nor heard any more of John Gordon or wife for two months, when a woman appeared at my office and introduced herself as the latter.

"Mine is a very bad case, Mr. Docket," said she, seating herself by my side.

"Indeed, madame, I thought you were very comfortably provided for. You have one-third of the income of your husband's estate, or about a thousand dollars a year."

"It seems I am not to have this," she replied gloomily.

"Not to have it?"

"Peter Gordon has taken possession of the estate, declaring it belongs to him. He says my husband sold it to him a few weeks before he died."

"How could that be?"

"Peter showed me the deed, and says it has been recorded."

"Does he? So much the better for you, madame. The law gives one-half of his personal estates——"

"But he sold it for one dollar," interrupted Mrs Gordon.

"He could not sell it without your concurrence. Did you release your right to dower in the premises?"

"No, sir; Peter says I did, though, and shows me my name, duly witnessed, on the deed."

"Did you sign it?"

"No, sir."

"Then it is a forgery."

"I suppose it is."

"You are confident you did not sign your name to the deed?"

"I am very sure I did not, and for a very good reason."

"How's that?"

"I cannot write? I never even wrote my name. I was brought up in the country, where girls did not get so much schooling as now. My folks were very poor, and I never had a chance to go to school," replied Mrs. Gordon, with some confusion.

"Did your husband know that you could not write?"

"No; I never told him."

I dismissed her with the request that she would call the next day. I went at once to the Registry of Deeds, and found that Mrs. Gordon had told a straight story. Her miserable, contemptible husband had given his property to his brother, in his last days, so as to cheat his wife, who cared for him in health, and nursed him in sickness, of her just claim upon his estate.

He was a villain! I need not say I felt a deep interest in the case of my client, and resolved to bring matters to an issue at once. The next day, when she called, she directed me to her sister, by whom it could be proven that Mrs. Gordon could not write her name; who had seen her make her mark often, within a very short time.

The person who professed to have witnessed the signature of Mrs. Gordon was a clerk in the office of Peter. My first move was to take steps to arrest him on charge of fraud, and to sue his employer for my client's share of the rents, which he had just collected, and which he had refused to pay over to her.

When I had proceeded thus far I received a visit from Peter Gordon.

"I mean to get justice for the widow."

"Her husband was worth nothing when he died."

But his wife has one-third interest in his real estate."

"It was sold to me; and she signed away her right to dower."

"Did she?"

"Certainly she did."

"Did you see her sign?"

"To be sure I did; so did my clerk."

"There is a warrant out for the arrest of your clerk; and I have some hopes that he will turn State's evidence and convict his principal."

He started back with astonishment and terror.

"I—I don't understand you!" he stammered out.

"Don't trouble yourself about it, Mr. Gordon, you will understand it all in due time."

"For God's sake, don't arrest my clerk! He will be the ruin of me," groaned he.

"You should have thought of that before," I said.

"You don't mean to say that everything isn't all right about my brother's affairs? Because, if it isn't, I will make it right, you know," he whined, in suppliecating tones.

"You say you saw Mrs. Gordon sign that deed?"

"Well, no—not exactly; but I suppose that she signed it."

"You don't know she didn't?"

"How should I know?"

"She can't write; she never even wrote her name in her life?"

"Gracious!"

I pressed the rascal closely, and made him acknowledge that his clerk had signed the name for a consideration. I would have caused both of them to be sent to the State Prison, if Mrs. Gordon had not begged me to spare them. As it was, I secured the entire income of the estate for my client, and charged my bill to Peter, who was but too glad to pay it.

MOSELEY'S TUBULAR WROUGHT-IRON

ARCH BRIDGES AND ROOFS!

THESE BRIDGES AND ROOFS have now been fully tested in this vicinity, and it is universally conceded that they cannot be excelled. The Roofs are wholly of Wrought Iron, or mixture of Wood and Iron—whichever may be desired.

The Bridges are wholly Wrought Iron, except the floor, which is Wood, like the floors of ordinary Bridges.

We are prepared to make these structures in any quantities, at prices about as follows:

Railroad Bridges, 50 feet span, 8,000 pounds, $17 50 per foot lineal.

Common Road or Turnpike, 50 ft. span, 2,500 pounds, $6 75 per foot lineal.

Roofs, all Iron, 50 feet width of building, $25 per 100 square feet; part Wood and part Iron, from $12 to $20 per square.

Increase of span of Bridges or width of buildings makes an increase of price, but the increase in price is no more than the increase of wooden structures.

We can furnish Iron of every size to work into Bridges and Roofs; and Railroads or other Companies buying the right to use them and the Iron of us, can make their own structures one third less than the above prices. Our structures weigh only from 1-4 to 1-10 that of Wood; difference in freight in a long distance buys our work. In a few days we will have at our factory, 497 West Third street, Cincinnati, four different specimens of our Roof, where the public can inspect them to their satisfaction. We beg them to give us a call, as all our work is warranted, and we ask no pay on ordinary jobs until the work is done and approved, payments being secured on contracting. Office No. 56 West Third street, Cincinnati, O.

SAVE YOUR MONEY!

LUMBER! LUMBER!!

TO ALL PURCHASERS OF LUMber, the PENNSYLVANIA LUMBER COMPANY would say, that they have established a Lumber Yard in the city of Louisville, where can be had a superior assortment of white Pine reasoned Lumber, Shingles, Hemlock Scantling and Joist. Their forest of Pine Timber is considered to be one of the best in the State. The Lumber is manufactured by gang saws, and consequently of great uniformity in thickness. An examination by purchasers will sustain its superiority over Lumber manufactured by single saws.

They are prepared to furnish, at wholesale or retail, any quantity, either at Yard or deliver on the river at any point between Pittsburg and the mouth of the Ohio, water permitting. An examination by all purchasers of Lumber is solicited; it will bear witness to its qualities, and tell its own merits.
